You may be able to figure out the SIM card details by sending a text to the phone number printed on the card. Check and review personal information such as phone number, ISD code, and IMEI number with Spycic. A little while ago, the new year crept in. Maybe it was your New Year's resolutions to exercise more or eat healthier or simply to start a new project. Maybe you ate a few too many cheese ball bites and didn't make it to the gym. Whatever it may be, remember now is the perfect time to take stock of what's been going on and plan for the year ahead. In an ideal world, you'd have already got everything in order, and should be on track for the best year yet. But we know that won't be the case. We've all got a tendency to fall off track. It's life! We've got stuff in our lives that catches up and makes us feel, well, un-New-Year-Like. So what to do? What can we do to get back on the path that leads to progress? Here are a few ways we can kick back into gear and start the year on a healthy note. Ask for help When it comes to our New Year's resolutions, do we stick with them? Sure, we might want them badly enough, but we've all got to realize that getting the results we want is not something that's going to happen overnight. That means we need to give ourselves a break from time to time, and ask for help. Now, there's a difference between asking for advice and asking for someone to fix our problems. In our world, we get a lot of the former. People offering advice about how to get something done might have an interest in whether it works. They might want to see you succeed more so that they can help you along. But there's a difference between helping someone and trapping them. It's all too easy for people to tell you what you want to hear and make you feel good when you're left thinking that you've done it all on your own. The best way to deal with this is to just ask. "Hey, I appreciate the help you gave me when I was trying to get started on this project. But what if we left
