Metal halide lamps have been used to good advantage for many years, not only as conventional lamps but as light sources in extremely harsh applications. Metal halide lamps, however, have not found wide commercial use in the United States for use in conventional tungsten filament lamps, probably because the quality and color rendering of metal halides are considered inferior to conventional tungsten filament lamps. Metal halides are known to yield high levels of high-frequency energy. There is an increased interest to use the metal halides for general lighting. High-frequency energy is generally considered in the art to be a disadvantage in lamps. There is a recognized need to further the light, color and spectral distribution of metal halides lamps to meet the needs of the lighting market. A metal halide lamp incorporating these features is disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 6,269,588 to Entwistle et al., the disclosure of which is incorporated by reference herein in its entirety. FIG. 1 illustrates the spectral properties of a conventional tungsten filament lamp for comparison with those of a metal halide lamp of FIG. 2.Q: How to show the first vertical bar symbol in Symbolics Emacs I use Emacs (GNU Emacs 22
