This invention relates generally to methods and apparatus for reducing fatigue failure in metal parts and, more particularly, to such a method and apparatus which yields a metal part having a high fatigue strength. With reference to FIG. 1, a conventional metal molding machine 20 of the set cyclic injection type is generally comprised of a screw 22, a barrel 26, a mold assembly 28, and a plunger 30. These components are generally, but not necessarily, mounted on a machine bed 32 with a top cover 34. The mold assembly 28 is generally comprised of a pair of mold halves 36, a sprue 38, a runner 40, and a number of cavities 42. The mold halves 36 are provided with the cavities 42 which are open in order that the molding material is able to enter from the sprue 38. A threaded portion 44 of the plunger 30 is engaged with a threaded portion 46 of the barrel 26. The threaded engagement of the plunger and barrel provides the translational force to move the plunger relative to the barrel. The screw 22 is rotatably driven by an electric motor 48 through a suitable coupling (not shown). The mold assembly 28, shown schematically in FIG. 2, and the barrel 26 are held together to form a mold cavity 50 which is defined by a first section 52
