Firmware (firmware) Windows 10 uses a new firmware, S0PU (System 0 Processor Unit), developed by Microsoft and Nuvotec. It is a highly tuned firmware designed for energy efficiency. An advantage of the new firmware is that it minimizes the CPU load by providing a low-power mode that shuts off most of the CPU and driver functionality. A newer version of the S0PU firmware, S1PU, was announced on January 6, 2017 and became available with the release of Windows 10 version 1709.
