Agree or disagree, Berman's arguments are compelling and powerful, and provide an irrefutable para entender el mundo tal y como lo conocemos. 2. Michael Berman has never been an ordinary researcher. He was constantly interested in how people perceive the world and define themselves in it, what they want and what they strive for. He never lost sight of the basic principles of psychology, which underlie the most diverse areas of human activity. And in this context, he studied all aspects of power and power, all types of organizations, all the consequences of change, political, economic and social, that some states experience and, fortunately, others do not. The professional activity that Berman was engaged in required deep psychological knowledge. He was like that and used them skillfully and with full dedication. In his research, he relied on the works of such prominent psychologists as Herter, Levin, Erickson, and Goldberg. Berman's books have become an important part of academic and scientific history, and his contributions to science have been repeatedly noted in professional and psychology publications. To this it is necessary to add the fact that Berman made a significant contribution both to psychology and to the socio-economic sphere. He became not only one of the greatest scientists of his time, but also one of the greatest experts of his time on political, economic and social problems. Like Hartley Bates, he used the power of his vast experience and knowledge with incredible energy and tenacity in his subsequent career. In addition, Michael Berman was one of the most influential psychologists in the United States. He founded the Institute for Social Research and went from staff member at Columbia University to president of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and editor and author of a parenting and education website. So, what influenced how Michael Berman managed to carry out his main project - to educate thousands of poor children by the age of twenty and thereby open access to their "I" and help them find their place in this world. What influenced this and to what extent? A lot of things influenced this. First of all, undoubtedly, his practical activity in the education of the poor. Such activity is something quite unusual. But this is also something completely ordinary, a lot of people would agree with him that children should not be poorer. And not only would they agree, but most likely they would be engaged in this matter. It's just that they didn't have the opportunity
