3. 5. Save the image in a file format that can be opened in the computer. Images open in many different file formats, but you always should save images with a file format that will open in the computer that you are using. The file extension is the most important aspect to look for in a file format, and it's a standard that can be opened in many devices on a computer. In the case of images saved in the.ai format, they open in the Adobe Illustrator program. Illustrator is a vector-based program that uses a file format known as a _vector image_ that's based on mathematical coordinates instead of pixels. Vector images are common on the Internet, and they take up much less space on a computer's hard drive or in the memory of a mobile device than raster images. Illustrator can be used to create the same type of images that Photoshop can, but it's best used with images already created in Photoshop to manipulate the text and objects in the image. You can convert an Illustrator file to Photoshop format with the Convert to PDF (Windows) or Image Composite Editor (Mac) file-type dialog. 4. 6. Save the image in the appropriate file format for the computer you are using. 5. 7. Open the file in the appropriate image editing software. The saved image file should be opened in whatever image editing program your computer uses to manage the image. For example, if you use an Apple Mac, it's the image editing application of choice, so opening the image in Photoshop is the best way to do it. The image you save from your mobile device is always saved as a.jpg file. If you use Adobe Photoshop Lightroom (a free application for managing images on your computer), you can import a.jpg file straight into Lightroom.

A questionnaire on the foot was distributed to all the patients attending the diabetic and dermatological clinic in a district general hospital. The answers were classified and analysed according to age, sex and area of residence, the foot condition itself, the foot care knowledge and the use of footwear. There was a high level of awareness about the risks associated with the presence of any type of ulceration of the foot. The main problems however were related to footwear, the use of socks and the awareness of the problem of peripheral vascular disease.The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Osteospermum plant botanically known as Osteospermum ecklonis and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'Balsilbon'. The new cultivar originated in a controlled breeding program in Elburn, Ill. during August 2005. The objective of the breeding program was the development of Osteospermum cultivars that are freely flowering with unique foliage and flower coloration. The new Osteospermum cultivar is the result of cross-pollination. The female (seed) parent of the new cultivar is the proprietary Osteospermum ecklonis breeding selection designated 'B06-4', not patented, characterized by its light pink and white bicolored daisy-type flowers, medium green-colored foliage, and upright-mounded growth habit. The male (pollen) parent of the new cultiv

A microRNA with cancer-specific differentiation-associated expression signature in ovarian cancer. Ovarian cancer, one of the most lethal gynecological malignancies, is the leading cause of cancer-related death in women in the United States. Earlier studies reported that hematopoietic-specific miRNAs can be used to detect acute myeloid leukemia. To determine whether such strategies are applicable to ovarian cancer, the expression of miRNAs known to be expressed in the hematopoietic system was assessed in ovarian cancer cell lines. The miRNAs miR-223, -199b, -186, and -199a were found to be upregulated in ovarian cancer. The expressions of these miRNAs were further assessed in 30 patient tumor samples and 30 normal ovarian tissue samples by quantitative reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction. Three of the miRNAs were found to be upregulated in 11 of the 30 ovarian cancer tissue samples (P Rationale This investigation used a mixed-methods design to determine differences in psychological well-being between non-abusers, mainly alcohol-dependent individuals receiving pharmacological treatment, and a non-treatment control group. Methods Ethical approval was obtained from the regional medical ethics committee. Participants were administered the Beck Depression Inventory, Self-Concept Scale, Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale, and Brief Job Satisfaction Scale. Data were analysed statistically using t tests, χ^2 tests, and logistic regression analyses. A thematic qualitative analysis of patients' experiences of working-illness management was also conducted. Results In total, 127 non-treatment controls and 90 clients receiving pharmacological treatment completed the study.
