I need to load an image from a local location and then display it in a WebApp. However, the image is in the same location as the WebApp. What is the location I should use? Should I use an absolute path? A: You can use ~/img/file.jpg. Here is a C# sample code. `byte[] imageBytes = null; HttpContext context = HttpContext.Current; if (context!= null) { string savePath = context.Server.MapPath("~/img/" + fileName); imageBytes = File.ReadAllBytes(savePath); }` Q: How to access the iFrame of an app using React Native? I'm struggling to access the iFrame created when loading an app. I can't get the contentDocument property in the iFrame. I have tried the methods below without success
