I want to use the installed package from other repository. I have 2 versions of the same package: the standard ubuntu lucid repository a custom repository with different package version (just for one package) This is my PPA file: Name: Lucid Builder Url: deb lucid main Distribution: Ubuntu Architecture: all Comment: Lucid Builders PPA Package: libvisual-0.5 Component: main Version: 6.5.0-1~lucid1 Name: Lucid Builder (lambda) Url: deb lucid main Distribution: Ubuntu Architecture: all Comment: Lucid Builders PPA (lambda) Package: libvisual-0.5 Component: main Version: 6.5.0-1~lucid1 I want to download/install libvisual-0.5 from the custom repository. How can I configure apt-get to use the package version from the custom repository? I tried: apt-get install -t custom libvisual-0.5 But it didn't work. The output is: Reading package lists... Done Building dependency tree Reading state information... Done E: Unable to locate package libvisual-0.5 I also tried to change the but then I have the same output. A: You can't. PPA's are not packages. Instead, you can modify the apt configuration file directly to point to the PPA. apt-add-repository will do this (it adds an entry in /etc/our lives, have fiddled with this concept.

That is, most of us have made our own list, counted our missteps, given ourselves a scorecard, and formulated a plan. Despite your best efforts, odds are high that you have never succeeded in seeing how your behavior progresses from one mistake to the next as well as having to constantly monitor your progress. You may find it hard to believe that you actually have the power to change your behavior. Though we have all heard of personal experiences that may suggest that being in the right place at the right time can cause some miraculous happenings, that is certainly not the norm in our world. It's probable that you have spent a considerable amount of your life or will in the future lab
