Working with the Layers Panel The Photoshop image editing process is based on the concept of layers. In Photoshop, these layers are _layers of invisibility_, which means that a layer's information is stored as a whole until you apply or remove the layer. A layer is an individual element used to create the whole or part of an image. If you create a new layer, it's as if you create a new sheet of paper and write on it. The layers in your image are invisible. There is nothing to see at the time, and they haven't been printed or captured on film yet. When you create a new layer, the layer becomes visible, ready to be drawn on or printed. Figure 10-3 shows the Layers panel in Photoshop CS3. It contains seven sections: * Layer *. This is where you define and organize layers. * Visible *. This is where you choose to make layers visible. By default, all layers in a Photoshop document are invisible unless you click the eye icon at the bottom-left corner to make them visible. * Image, Smart Object, and Adjustment *. These options allow you to make sure that the layer is imported into the Photoshop document. * Borders *. This section is where you work with the layer's settings. You can add or remove a layer's borders, change its style, and change its color. * Opacity *. This setting enables you to change the brightness, contrast, and color of a layer. * Contents *. This

Q: Where in the regex patterns do .* and [^a-zA-Z]+ come from? I found that the following patterns are valid: /^.$/migrep.py -D ^(.)$/migrep.py -D (Say the input file contains 100 lines, I was able to find it with pattern 1 and pattern 2.) What is the difference between that and "^.$" and "^(.)$"? I find that if I use "." only, it won't match the following cases (ie. they won't find the code), which is the default pattern: Uni-Uni-unicode.txt unicode.txt Uni-nUnicode_SymbolTable_Unicode_UCS2.txt Uni-uUnicode_SymbolTable_Unicode_UCS2.txt Uni-uUnicode_SymbolTable_Unicode_UCS4.txt Could anyone help? Thanks a lot! A: As per the documentation of the perl regex engine, ^.$ and ^(.)$ are two regular expressions. The expression ^.$ is the "empty string" match (no matches). The expression ^(.)$ is the "capture group" match. The group (.) is a non-capturing group, so this one doesn't affect the $1 match. The group ([^a-zA-Z]+) is a "character class", as noted in comments. It matches any character that is not a-zA-Z. The [^a-zA-Z] also can be written as [^a-zA-Z]+. The expression ^.$ is just the negation of the previous expression, [^a-zA-Z]+. That is, matches a string that starts with a-zA-Z, or any number of characters other than a-zA-Z. If ^ and $ don't cancel, then you will get a match for empty strings. This is basically the same as what you've done. A: This is a general explanation of the two patterns. The first example is ^.$ - or, as others have pointed out, it is the empty

The Spot Healing Brush uses the content of an image to choose the optimal area to repair. The Eraser tool is useful for erasing portions of an image. The Clone tool lets you use the color, width or amount of pixels from another image to duplicate an area in the current image. Smudge Tool is used to make an image disorganized. You can use this tool to create a dripping effect by painting over an image. The Magic Wand is used to select an area of an image. Once it's selected, it's possible to edit the selection by clicking on other areas in the image. The Gradient Tool is used to create different color shapes within an image. The Pen Tool can be used to select different color shapes, like the Rectangular Selection Tool and the Elliptical Selection Tool. The Goof Proofing Tool can be used for correcting small defects in an image. It allows you to drag a selection rectangle and directly correct or fix a defect. Once you're done correcting an image, you can use the Paste in Place option to paste the image directly onto the desktop. You can also copy the image into another directory.
