1. Field of the Invention The present invention is related to a shoe and, more particularly, to a shoe with a slipproof feature and a protective covering therefor. 2. Description of the Prior Art It is always a concern to a user that a shoe slip on a foot and be dragged by the user when the user is walking or using a staircase. While it is also a concern to a user that a shoe slip on a foot and be worn out because it is easily frayed by the user's foot while in use. To solve the problem described above, a shoe with a slipproof feature is provided. The shoe comprises a sole and a front covering at the bottom of the sole. The front covering has a pair of front flaps extending upwardly and a single supporting member extending downwardly. Each front flap has a top edge and a pair of lateral edges respectively. The top edge of one front flap is detachably and fixedly coupled with the front covering and the top edge of the other front flap is detachably and fixedly coupled with the top edge of the former front flap. The outer periphery of the supporting member is detachably and fixedly coupled with the sole. When the supporting member is moving toward the sole, the supporting member would interfere with the upper surface of the sole and the coupling between the supporting member and the sole is not firm and unreliable. To solve the problem, the top edge of the front flap of the present invention is detachably and fixedly coupled with the front covering by an elastic fabric, such as rubber. Furthermore, the top edge of the front flap and the supporting member of the present invention are designed such that each front flap is resiliently deformed and returned to its original shape when the user walks on the shoe, this feature effectively avoids the shoe from being caught by the user's foot. The present invention will become clearer in light of the following detailed description of the preferred embodiment of this invention in connection with the accompanying drawings. There is much talk today of the importance of data to the success of any organization. From finance, to operations, to marketing, to HR - the accumulation and use of data has become an increasingly critical consideration in the success of any business, especially as the market gets more competitive. Today's leaders know that the future is data driven; it is what holds the key to a successful and profitable business. The idea of a Big Data system has long been debated by organizations. But with the evolution of various software products

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a semiconductor memory device and, more particularly, to a row decoder circuit which reduces the number of input signals and the number of output signals and uses an output buffer with a short pulse width for a signal. 2. Description of the Related Art FIGS. 4A to 4D and 5A to 5D are circuit diagrams of conventional row decoder circuits, respectively. FIG. 4A is a circuit diagram of a conventional row decoder circuit which has a large gate size. FIG. 4B is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 4A in which the number of input signals is reduced by reduction and stabilization of a signal output from a NOR type logic circuit 8 via a driver transistor 2. FIG. 4C is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 4B in which the number of input signals is further reduced and the pulse width of an output signal is shortened. FIG. 4D is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 4C in which a NOR type logic circuit 8 and a buffer circuit 9 are linked and a pulse width of an output signal is shortened by a delay circuit 10. FIG. 5A is a circuit diagram of a conventional row decoder circuit which has a small gate size. FIG. 5B is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 5A in which the number of input signals is reduced by reduction and stabilization of a signal output from a NOR type logic circuit 8 via a driver transistor 2. FIG. 5C is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 5B in which the number of input signals is further reduced and the pulse width of an output signal is shortened. FIG. 5D is a circuit diagram of the same row decoder circuit as that of FIG. 5C in which a NOR type logic circuit 8 and a buffer circuit 9 are linked and a pulse width of an output signal is shortened by a delay circuit 10. In FIGS. 4A to 4D, the row decoder circuit includes four CMOS inverters 1, a NOR type logic circuit 2, a buffer circuit 3, a delay circuit 4, a buffer circuit 5, a delay circuit 6, a buffer circuit 7, and a driver transistor 2. The delay circuit 6 is a circuit for delaying the output signal of the buffer circuit 5
