The BBC's Mark Hollingsworth in Berlin says there's been an increase in anti-Semitism in the city in recent years and it's been directed at the world media, especially Jews. "There is a level of anti-Semitism out there which may be manifested by people walking around with the slogan on their T-Shirts: "Death to the Jews", but it is also of course manifested by people on social media, by far-right demonstrations where neo-Nazis openly encourage violence against Jews and against Jews by Israel. "The fact is that many Jews in Berlin feel really alarmed by this rise in anti-Semitism." Palestinians clash with Israeli border police during protests against a planned new Jewish neighbourhood in East Jerusalem Tourists look at a destroyed Jewish shop in the centre of the German capital Berlin on February 7, 2008 German-Jewish groups have said it's vital to have the images of Berlin on the streets, in the shops, on the TV screens of the world. The country needs to remember the atrocities of the Nazis and draw on those memories, and it needs to remember what happened to the Jews in the Second World War. "One of the things in Europe that is very powerfully shown at the moment is just how many people suffered during the Second World War under the Nazis." says Sara Forsberg from the German-Israeli Association. "Germany is a country which is important for Israel - and for the world. In the coming months it will be shown to the world again what the Nazis did to the Jews and what the rest of the world has failed to do. "Today, many Jews are talking about 'anxious Jews' - that is those Jews that are anxious about tomorrow, worried about the future, whether we have a good future, whether we have hope. "Many 595f342e71
