fairbanks int'l airport has a very unique water runway built into the complex (click on the image to the left to see it). with rtm's bwep scenery series, we utilized this area to add a bwep complex by adding to the fairbanks international airport scenery. there is a pullout there and a maintenance complex for bwep aircraft. dex has added a season switcher to this one so different things are happening with the ai aircraft during the different seasons. if you have bwep, or only fairbanks int'l airport, you will find this an interesting addition. you can fly in from prince rupert airport in a wheeled plane, and land on the sloped strip, or fly your float plane (or drive a boat) from the nearby kincolith seaplane base. flight plan's have been included from both of the destinations (fairbanks int'l). the a330-200 is the largest aircraft in the a330 series and also one of the most common in the world. designed for long distance (or short haul large capacity) flights it is a common site on most airports. even though it is not the most modern aircraft, it still has all the characteristics of its smaller siblings. they are highly integrated and automated aircraft where the pilot is often just monitoring the complex systems. the aerosoft a330 professional is a logical follow-up of our a320 series but you will find many systems are redone to a higher level of detail. the modeling and texturing are state of the art. the a330 is the bigger brother of the ubiquitous a320 series. designed for long distance (or short haul large capacity) flights it is a common site on
